Rebecca Haacker
NCAR/UCAR

Rebecca Haacker is the Director of NCAR’s Advanced Study Program and UCAR’s SOARS Center for Higher Education. She oversees a suite of programs that include internship programs for community college and undergraduate students, the well-known SOARS program, as well as graduate student and faculty visitor opportunities and postdoc fellowships. Her team leads professional development workshops for students, such as the NCAR Undergraduate Leadership Workshop to introduce them to the wide range of careers in the geosciences. The SOARS Center hosts the PI-Network of Geosciences Research Experiences for Undergraduates, which provides faculty development and common practices in running internships. Rebecca is a geographer and cultural anthropologist with a graduate degree from the University of Hamburg, Germany. She has extensive training in student counseling and diversity issues, and is a certified mediator for workplace conflicts. Rebecca serves on several national boards, including the AMS Board for Women and Minorities and the AMS Board for Private Sector Meteorologists, and speaks nationally on workforce trends and student development.
